

About the Authors

Britney Shaw

Britney Shaw is a senior at Georgetown University's School of Health, majoring in Human Science and minoring in Public Health. She hopes to continue to integrate these disciplines into future research endeavors and aspires to pursue a career in the medical field.

Lily Shytle

Lily Shytle is a member of the Class of 2024 majoring in Neurobiology and minoring in French on the pre-medical track. She is interested in exploring the intersection between biology and human behavior, as well as how clinical science can be used to improve people's lives.

Madelyn McLaughlin

Madelyn McLaughlin received her bachelor's degree in Human Science from Georgetown's School of Nursing and Health Studies in 2022. She has remained in DC after graduation to work at the Milken Institute's Center for Public Health, supporting projects across their mental health, health equity, and prevention and chronic disease pillars. In the future, she hopes to earn her Master's in Public Health and improve public and community health through equitable, innovative solutions.

Lindsey Kuwahara

Lindsey Kuwahara is a senior in the School of Health at Georgetown University, majoring in Human Science and minoring in Public Health. She hopes to continue to study the intersection of public health and medicine and plans to pursue a career in the medical field.

Amanda Gao

Amanda Gao is a recent graduate from Georgetown University's School of Health, where she majored in Healthcare Management and Policy. She is an advocate for health equity and is pursuing a career in public health policy.